ABSTRACT

Device, system and method for detection and handling of misaligned data access. A method may include, for example, detecting misaligned data access resulting from execution of a code block translated from a first format suitable for a first computing platform to a second format suitable for a second computing platform, and modifying said code block according to said misaligned data access.